Introduction

The Department of Health and Wellness is committed to improving the health and well-being of all Islanders. However, health and social problems are negatively impacting the everyday lives of Islanders and are placing increasing pressure on health and community-related services delivered in Prince Edward Island.

Similar to health systems across the country, Prince Edward Island faces critical issues and trends that threaten sustainability. Among these trends are the growing rates of disease and illness as well as influences of personal health knowledge and behaviours and other social determinants of health that place increasing demands on the health system. Costs to deliver health services, including for more specialized and expensive care options, are increasing while health care is impacted by health human resource shortages. Budgetary pressures strain already limited resources for service as well as supportive policy, leadership and accountability. Overall there is high expectation of the health system by the public and an ever increasing need for people to take charge of their health.

Together, we must seek to strengthen health services in terms of quality, accessibility, affordability, accountability, and sustainability while also shifting the conversation towards prevention and health promotion. This will support, and is expected of, healthy Islanders, healthy communities. Great opportunities are ahead if we work together and put people first.

This 2015-2018 Strategic Plan identifies areas of focus to strengthen health services, as well as prevention and health promotion, given current and future challenges and opportunities. To make this happen, there is a need for:

- greater collaboration among public, private and community partners and service providers;
- more involvement of other government departments to improve health, well-being and quality of life;
- more responsive and effective programs and services; and
- more engaged Islanders, taking control of their well-being.

The priorities outlined in this Strategic Plan will help the Department of Health and Wellness fulfill its mandate to provide leadership and policy direction and the potential that these activities have in enhancing the health and well-being of Islanders.

The Department's strategic plan will help guide decision making and activities within the PEI health system, and act as an umbrella strategic framework for Health PEI. Moving forward there will be greater alignment and integration of Health PEI and divisional priorities to the Department.

Government and community partners have roles to play in ensuring strong accountability. The Department will measure progress towards the expected outcomes, as identified in this plan, and will report annually to the public. Feedback on this plan and implementation is welcomed.

Our Purpose

Why We Exist

The Department of Health and Wellness exists to serve and support all Islanders. The role of the Department is to provide leadership, policy direction and programs that contribute to:

- high quality, accessible, affordable, effective, and sustainable health services provided to Islanders; and
- health protection and promotion to improve the health and wellness of Islanders.

We carry out these activities in partnership with individuals and their families as well as Health PEI, health professions, private sector health care providers, community and non-government organizations, and other government departments.

High Quality, Accessible, Affordable, Accountable, and Sustainable

Islanders deserve health services that are:

- » high quality based on the best possible evidence, including research and scientific evidence, clinical experience and other credible information;
- » accessible to all Islanders, encouraging involvement in their health-related decisions;
- » affordable for Island families;
- » accountable to the needs of patients, their families, and all Islanders; and
- » sustainable now and into the future.

Health Protection and Promotion

In addition to ensuring high quality, accessible, affordable, accountable and sustainable health services, Prince Edward Island must focus on helping to keep people in good health as long as possible, referred to as health protection and health promotion.

Many of the greatest advancements in public health over the last century are related to health protection. Health protection refers to activities that decrease population health risk and prevent disease and illness (e.g., food and water safety, motor vehicle safety, tobacco control, immunization and control of infectious disease).¹

Healthy Islanders Healthy Communities

Health refers to more than just the absence of disease. The World Health Organization's definition of health describes it as “a state of complete physical, mental and social well-being and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity”.² Health promotion, or wellness, is a proactive concept that refers to the process of enabling people to increase control over, and to improve their health.²

Many of the factors influencing health protection and health promotion lie outside the health sector. What makes Islanders healthy or unhealthy is related to the conditions in which an individual is born, grows, lives, works and ages. These conditions are referred to as the social determinants of health and include factors such as education, employment, income, social and physical environments, and personal health knowledge and behaviours. Advancing health protection and health promotion requires a multi-sectoral approach to health that addresses underlying determinants. Islanders, communities, and government must work together to help improve health outcomes.

Divisions

Department of Health and Wellness reports to the Minister and is accountable to the Provincial Government Executive Council. The Department consists of four divisions:

Health Policy and Programs	Chief Public Health Office	Chief Mental Health and Addictions Office	Sport Recreation and Physical Activity
-----------------------------------	-----------------------------------	--	---

Health Policy and Programs

This division provides policy and planning direction in various aspects of health care delivery that, in turn, assist the Minister in providing leadership, strategic direction and oversight of the health care system. The division is also responsible for health workforce planning through the actions of the Recruitment and Retention Secretariat.

Chief Public Health Office (CPHO)

Public health is defined as the organized efforts of society to keep people healthy and prevent injury, illness and premature death. It is the combination of programs, services and policies that protect and promote health.

This division is responsible for delivery of health protection programs as legislated under the Public Health Act, and collaborating with partners in areas of health promotion to proactively support Islanders in leading healthy lives. The CPHO recently assumed responsibility for the Health Promotion Unit which is mandated to implement the new provincial Wellness Strategy. The division also monitors provincial health trends to help inform program and public health policy development.

Chief Mental Health and Addictions Office (CMHAO)

Established in 2013, the Chief Mental Health and Addictions Office is responsible for mental health and addictions policy and planning in PEI. The Office is currently working with government departments, community partners, and Islanders to develop a long-term vision and strategy for Prince Edward Island. The strategy will establish goals for supporting and promoting the mental health of Islanders and for reducing gambling and substance abuse. The strategy will pursue policies that support promotion, prevention, early intervention, and treatment and recovery. Policies will also aim to increase public awareness of mental health and addictions issues with effort put towards reducing stigma and discrimination.

Sport, Recreation and Physical Activity

This division provides support to a number of sport, recreation, and health promotion activities that strengthen the community fabric of PEI. These activities impact the wellness and quality of life of Islanders and provide opportunities for community engagement and individual participation and excellence.

Ministry Responsibility

The Health Services Act, Section 3, defines that the Minister shall ensure the provision of health services in the province in accordance with the provincial health plan.

At the same time together we must shift the conversation towards prevention and health promotion. This means more engaged Islanders taking control of their well-being.

Stronger accountability is needed and the Department commits to report to the public on excepted outcomes identified in this Strategic Plan.

This is what will lead to healthy Islanders, healthy communities.
